

The Community Experience Partnership: The Social Determinants of Behavioral Health, Domains, and Indicators

Background: Behavioral health is shaped by the environments in which people live, learn, work and play. Health inequities are caused by disparities in access and opportunity and are shaped by our physical, social, and economic environments. By understanding the risk and protective factors that influence mental health, substance use, and access to treatment at the neighborhood level, we can begin to address the root causes of behavioral health inequities in our communities. The following model was developed in collaboration with community experts, representatives from County of San Diego BHS, and UC San Diego (UCSD) researchers during a four-part workgroup series conducted between January and April 2022.

*Healthy People 2030, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion. Retrieved [May 20, 2022], from <https://health.gov/healthypeople/objectives-and-data/social-determinants-health>